Description

This 10-hour circular route departs from Porto and heads to the city of Viseu, located in the heart of the Dão region, a land of tradition, fine dining, and living history. The main objective is to savor the famous arroz de cabidela (rice with blood), an emblematic dish of the region, but the route offers several enriching stops along the way. Leaving Porto, take the A1 and A25 highways, passing through the beautiful Caramulo area. A stop at the Caramulo Museum is highly recommended, a surprising space that brings together ancient art, modern painting, and a remarkable collection of classic cars. The road to Viseu offers views of the lush mountains and vineyards of the Dão region.

Arriving in Viseu, the city reveals itself to be vibrant and historic. The center is ideal for a stroll, starting with the imposing Cathedral, with its Romanesque origins and Baroque elements, and the Cathedral Churchyard, with its Portuguese pavement and historic facades. Nearby, the Grão Vasco Museum displays masterpieces of Portuguese painting, and the downtown streets are lined with traditional shops, terraces, and churches. The highlight of the day is lunch with arroz de cabidela (rice with blood), made Beira-style, with home-cooked chicken or rooster, arroz malandrinho (malandrinho rice), and vinegar seasoning, served in clay pots. Several local restaurants prepare it expertly, often accompanied by a robust red wine from the Dão region.

After your meal, you can visit Aquilino Ribeiro Park, ideal for a peaceful stroll, or the Viseu Funicular, which connects the city center to the historic district. If time permits, a stop at the modern Cava de Viriato, with views of the city, is a perfect end to your visit.

The return to Porto is via an alternative route, with the option of stopping in Vouzela or São Pedro do Sul for coffee or a quick visit to the thermal baths. The day ends in Porto, with your taste buds and senses touched by the flavors and traditions of the Viseu region.
